Our brother Alonso is truly a gift to us all.

He single handedly organized one of the largest public defenders offices in the country and the Federal defenders office in San Diego to conduct their own protest rally. Despite Alonso only being in their office less than 3 years he is respected by his peers who have decades more experience because he has set the record for the most trials to verdict every year he has been there. He organized, lead and spoke at the protest today for the massive gathering of supporters/protestors.

Alonso has once again demonstrated the kind of commitment, sacrifice and leadership that are the qualities of character that is the hallmark of a real warrior. He first demonstrated his character as a US Marine where he fought for us folks in horribly violent war. He volunteered and risked his life for us in exchange for his right to become a citizen. He learned to speak English along the way. Despite being threatened by his superiors, Alonso staged the protest during the middle of the defenders' work day. To listen to his speech today, as a world class orator, made me so fucking proud to be a lawyer and a human.

Alonso is the quality of person that we are looking for. Those people who don't fight against what they hate as much as they fight for what they love. The kind who are out doing it and are risking their very security and safety to stand for something that elevates the human condition and humanity.

I am more than honored that Alonso, a real life no shit warrior, will continue to share his passion, his experience and his love for humanity as an instructor at Gerry's Ranch next summer. I hand picked Alonso when I first met him when he was an intern at the Ranch. He embodies everything we are looking for. Commitment, courage, love, respect and an tireless pursuit to be a Trial Lawyer trying cases.

Warriors like Alonso are why

Here he stands, risking his career and his physical safety,
standing before a wall of white
police officers, calling them out
for their failure to take a stand against corruption and racism:
